

TO THE SHOT-GUN

THE MAINE RADICALS WILL APPEAL.

The Greenbacks Heartily Endorse Governor Garcelon's Conduct—A Mob Takes Possession of the City of Bangor, and Resist the Removal of Arms.

AGUSTA, Me., December 25.—The selection men of Webster and Lisbon have had interviews with the governor relative to a change in the certificate of election from those towns. The certificate was given to the democrats on the ground that the three names which were appended to the returns were all signed by one person. The selection men have made affidavit that each signed for himself, and that all other formalities were properly complied with. The selection seem confident that the certificate of election to Beloit, deerfield, will be recalled, and that a new one will be ordered to be issued to Thomas, republican.

A full meeting of the greenback state committee was held at delegates appointed to the national convention, which meets in Washington January 1st, and at large meeting Congressmen G. W. Ladd and J. H. March, and S. C. Chase. Resolutions were passed indorsing the action of the governor and council, declarer full confidence in them. Quotations were had that the counted the votes honestly. They denounced the utterances of republican politicians in public meetings and the utterances against the executive department of the state as an insult to the governor and council and a disgrace to the state as well as to the party. They express the opinion that the republicans are in a minority in the state, and that a large majority of them would have been members of the opposition had it not been for extensive bribes and the vilest intimation at the polls.

They view with shame and indignation the humiliating spectacle of the Maine United states senators engaged in rousing the community to a state of violence that threatens riot and bloodshed, and consider as the greatest criminals in our midst those who have resorted to such methods as appeal to the power of revolution, the treason rebels.

BANGOR, Me., December 25.—Much excitement was created here to-day by reports of the intended removal of arms and ammunition to the interior, to Augusta, to be forwarded to the front. About 5 o'clock, p.m., two train teams loaded with arms and ammunition were stopped on the Kenduskeag bridge by a crowd with only means of communication that filled the streets, declaring that the arms should never be carried out of the city. Major Dyer, commanding the troops of the 10th Mass., who was present, said no satisfactory answer was given at first. A young man named French, appeared who said he was a member in the adjutant-general's staff and was making his way to the adjutant-general's office. The ex-memorandum of the governor, the ex-element of the populace was greatly increased by this statement and the crowd attempted to unharness the horses. Major Dyer told the crowd he had no arms enough to guarantee the safety of the munitions. If an attempt were made to remove them, he would be responsible for the trouble that might ensue. Mr. French decided it was best to return the arms to the arsenal rather than to turn the horses to a nail and the men to their posts in the hope of saving their future. The public exclamation was increased by a report that J. L. Smith, the greenback candidate for governor, S. C. Chase, the fusion Indian agent, and Major M. M. Fossum of Oldtown, were at the Panobscot exchange during the day, and Major Polson, who was present, said that he had been informed that he had told Clark French that he made a mistake in not pushing through to the depot, and urged him to change his mind and return to the arsenals. Mr. French, however, was unwilling to assume the responsibility of a collision with the populace. The excitement is at fever heat throughout the state.

CHRISTMAS INDOORS AND OUT.

Making the Poor Glad—Notable Junktiers.

New York, December 25.—Christmas was very narrow. Adjutant General Levitt will arrive here to-morrow. What will be done is not known.

It is known that the republicans are forming a secret military association, and threats have been made that they would seize the arsenals.

A resolution signed by Mayor Brown, a number of ex-mayors of the city, and other prominent citizens expressing surprise at the attempt to move arms and ammunition to the interior, was introduced in the legislature.

The first speaker was General S. C. Chase, the fusion Indian agent, and Major M. M. Fossum of Oldtown, was seated at the Panobscot exchange during the day, and Major Polson, who was present, said that he had been informed that he had told Clark French that he made a mistake in not pushing through to the depot, and urged him to change his mind and return to the arsenals.

Mr. French, however, was unwilling to assume the responsibility of a collision with the populace. The excitement is at fever heat throughout the state.

THE NORTHERN CAROLINA LINES.

Chattanooga, December 25.—The escape from blockade was very narrow. An adjutant general was sent to the city to inspect the fortifications. The public exclamation was increased by a report that J. L. Smith, the greenback candidate for governor, S. C. Chase, the fusion Indian agent, and Major M. M. Fossum of Oldtown, were at the Panobscot exchange during the day, and Major Polson, who was present, said that he had been informed that he had told Clark French that he made a mistake in not pushing through to the depot, and urged him to change his mind and return to the arsenals.

THE KNOXVILLE EXTENSION.

Knoxville Chronicle, 25th.

A prominent railroad man reached our city at 4 o'clock Tuesday morning. He was met at the depot by a number of persons invited to buy the Western North Carolina railroad to extend the road to Ducktown, Tenn., or before 1862. Ducktown is about 100 miles from Chattanooga, and the route there is open, one to Dalton, the other to Chattanooga. This line will be completed with the aid of the Georgia and Western railroad king. Considering this little fact in connection with the recent sale of his Georgia railroad stock, it looks as if Georgia and Port Royal will not form part of the great through route to the West. The Georgia and Western railroad has been sold to the state of Georgia, and it is now in the hands of the state of Georgia. The Georgia and Western railroad king. THE CINCINNATI SIGNAL SERVICE BRANCH.

Mr. Charles Nordhoff, the able Washington correspondent of the New York Herald, has been engaged to manage the Cincinnati railroad to extend the road to Ducktown, Tenn., or before 1862. THE OUTSIDE LINE.

Knoxville, December 25.—The weather throughout the Pacific slope is unprecedently cold.

CINCINNATI, December 25.—Heavy rains have fallen here for the past two days along the Ohio river and the prospects are that there will be a flood. The river has risen nine feet here during the past twenty-four hours. In Kettering, the water has reached a point where it has become necessary to close the dam, and notwithstanding the bad weather, the church was attended.

CINCINNATI, December 25.—The usual services in the churches were held and dinner to penitent charitable institutions given. The Messiah was performed to-night at the Ohio theatre, and the audience was greatly pleased.

THE GREENBANK CHURCH ROW.

The Rev. Wm. Nevin Woodside was untilled to remove to Pittsburg, the pastor of the First Reformed Presbyterian church in Duvel street, Brooklyn. He had about two weeks ago, however, his health failing, he preached to small congregations. His ministry was satisfactory, and his church reluctantly consented to his going away. One of the elders said, "We are sorry to see him go, but we are sorry to see him go." Another elder recently remonstrated with him to the love and affection of his wife. He had a dry and hoarse voice, and was unable to speak clearly. The people of the church were greatly distressed, and the pastor, in his opinion, was not fit to preach. PHILADE

The Constitution.

Entered as second class matter at the Atlanta post-office, December 11, 1879.

ATLANTA, GA., DECEMBER 27, 1879

CHRISTMAS is past, and the juveniles are now engaged in dismembering their newly-acquired toys, while their elders are preparing to swear off again when the new year comes in.

The capture of Chief Secocooni is the closing act in the Zulu war, and peace once more reigns in south Africa. Another tribe has been crushed, and another strip of territory added to the good queen's dominions. This is called the march of civilization.

The cold wave which struck Georgia yesterday in full force came directly from the north, where it is prevailing with almost unexampled rigor. Heavy snow at the north, and heavy rains in Kentucky and Tennessee escorted it to the Georgia line. Its force will doubtless be expended this week.

The Chilianos have only, it seems, to reach the allied forces to achieve a victory. The latest battle took place at Tarapaca, resulting in a stampede of the Peruvians and Bolivians. The Peruvians are just now talking more about the defences of Callao and Lima than about agressing field movements.

Chairman ATKINS of the house appropriations committee is in a very bad state of health. He has been ailing for a long time, and it is now feared that he will not be able to perform any more active service this session. If his health does not improve, Mr. Blount will become the head of the most important committee of congress—a place that he now practically fills, and that he can hereafter fill, to the satisfaction of the country.

The change in the French cabinet creates a ripple in politics. The new president of the council, M. De Freycinet, is the present minister of public works, and his cabinet will, it is understood, include most of the Waddington cabinet. Waddington himself will have charge of the country's foreign affairs, which will be much more in accordance with his tastes than that of the presidency of the council. M. De Freycinet's programme will be somewhat more liberal than that of the retiring premier, but the changes will not be sudden or surprising.

The latest accounts from Cabul show that General Roberts is waiting for General Gough, although one report states that the latter has reached the beleaguered army. Gough's force is a small one—not exceeding three thousand men—and it is far from certain that the combined force could secure to themselves much freedom of action in a country that contains two million of half-civilized fanatics. The cantonments are in the center of a mob, and it seems to be Roberts' fate to endure tedium and assaults until next April. The exact situation at Shikpur is however unknown, and it is feared that we get from India only a part of the truth.

The Situation in Maine.

The mob that stopped the cart loaded with arms in the streets of Bangor was the natural result of the harangues of the Mulligan politicians. They went systematically to work to inflame the minds of the people, and the acts of the mob in the streets of Bangor on Christmas was as much their own acts as if they had stopped the horses that drew the now historic cart. At this writing no further acts of mob rule are anticipated, and it is believed the good sense of the people of Maine will prove stronger than the demagogues. Governor Garcelon and his supporters are not men who can be frightened by the denunciations of men who have notoriously been engaged for years in defeating the will of the people by almost every known device of fraud and force.

At Washington a more pacific tone also begins to prevail. Garfield has come to the conclusion that the republicans had better "walk on the knife-edge, of the law" instead of resorting to revolution, and Mr. Hayes advises the republican members of the legislature to resort to Cushing's manual in the regular legislature instead of trying to set up one of their own. These opinions fairly express the present sentiment of the republican politicians. They are not the outcome of any superior respect for the law—nothing of that kind; they spring from a cool and careful consideration of the bearings of the case upon the politics of the country, and particularly upon the next presidential election. They believe that agitation outside of the fusion legislature and obstruction in the way will be most fruitful of political capital than a more revolutionary course. They stand too, in wholesome fear of a democratic congress, before which any attempt at a dual government would come for settlement, and by which the electoral vote of Maine is to be counted. Vote it not for the democrats in congress, a man would doubtless pitch Governor Garcelon and his council out of the windows of the capitol; but as the case stands the appeals of the Jim Blaines of the state will pass harmlessly away, leaving the state in the hands of the fusionists. They confessedly have a majority in the state, and having also the means to prevent or detect frauds in the elections of next fall, there can be little doubt of their ability to control the next legislature, and carry their electoral ticket. This would displace the ancient Hamlin and thoroughly reclaim the state. They are firm and discreet, and are content to let their foiled adversaries do most of the fuming and talking.

Commissioners Henderson and the Clement Mills.

We present this morning a communication from Colonel J. T. Henderson, commissioner of agriculture of the state of Georgia, on the subject of the Clement attachment. The testimony that this practical opinion given through the press to the farmers of Georgia, but bears out the opinions that we have advanced already in these columns. We are gratified at this, the more because of late we notice the enterprisers of the opposition that is sure to come to these mills, from the hands of middlemen, manufacturers and monopolists. It would be surprising if these assaults did not come. The general introduction of the Clement mills would break down many a business that is now flourishing, and it has already won enough prominence to stimulate depreciation. We do not blame those who feel bound for reasons of self-protection to destroy it. We feel duty bound, however, to warn the public not to take the depreciation without allowance. We have already advised them to weigh our praise carefully. Just as we may be led by our enthusiasm over so simple a thing that promises so much, to say more than is justifiable, so they may be induced by quite as powerful reasons to give it too little. We repeat here what we have always said, and which the friends of the Clement attachment all say—"It is best for those who think of investing to go and give the Clement mills a personal inspection."

There is nothing that we could add to the admirable paper of Colonel Henderson's. There is one point, however, at which, in his abundant caution, he puts the little mill at a disadvantage. In his estimate of the profits of the mills—and this is the very lowest figure we have seen at $1,025 a year on a single mill, which costs $3,500. But, it must be understood that, in his calculation he has already charged up 8 per cent. interest on the money invested in the mill and on the money invested in material. So that the Clement mill besides paying 8 per cent. on every dollar invested in buying and operating it—which would of itself satisfy any reasonable man—$1,025 or 50 per cent. of its cost, the year first—so that taking Colonel Henderson's figures as we have already remarked, two men might invest $3,500 in a Clement mill. The first year they could draw 8 per cent. on their $3,500, 8 per cent. on the running capital, and draw out one-half of the $3,500 permanent investment. The second year they could repeat this and draw out the other half. They would have a mill that had cost them nothing, bringing in an income of $1,000 to $1,800 a year. A double mill would bring about double results, and so on indefinitely. Now these are not our figures. They are the figures of the head of the farming interests of Georgia—the figures of a man who has personally inspected the machine and seen it at work, and who, after months of deliberation, over his own name sends them forth as facts. We believe that no such investment was ever offered to a people before. We have no doubt that within the next ten years we shall see these little mills at work in every county in the cotton belt.
